In the absence of another, more effective form of treatment, the only option is to continue with the medication prescribed by the doctor. The side effects are manageable, and most patients cope well with them. The medication is effective in controlling the symptoms, but it is important to monitor the patient's progress regularly. The doctor will adjust the dosage as necessary to ensure the best possible outcome.

The text continues with a discussion of the potential long-term effects of the medication and the importance of regular follow-up appointments. The patient is encouraged to take an active role in their treatment, asking questions and discussing any concerns they may have with their healthcare provider.
The problem is one of regional influence and internal management of resources. The story of seasonal influence and internal management of resources is reflected in the way in which the region's economy is driven by local conditions, with the local economy being influenced by local district policies.

The issue of the regional government's economic policies and the economic policies of individual districts have been discussed in previous papers. In this paper, the issue of economic policies and the economic policies of individual districts will be discussed in more detail.
