must first look to our own

PREFACE.

THE continued success of, and the increased demand for, the "A B C Telegraphic Code," combined with the many urgent friendly requests of numerous users of this work, have induced the Author to avail himself of the alterations in the Rules and Regulations of the Telegraphic Conference, to thoroughly revise and improve upon the previous editions. This has entailed a very great expense and outlay of time, labour, and material, which he hopes will meet with increased approbation. The first edition contained about 12,800 sentences; the present nearly 25,000, a very important and valuable advance. At the same time, every attention and care have been given in the recompiling to adapt the Code to satisfy the said Rules and Requirements of the Telegraphic Conference of 1879.

Every day the value of the telegraphic system is being more and more felt. It has revolutionised our commerce, and proved of inestimable value in domestic affairs; there is no relation of life in which the influence of the change it has effected has not been felt. Electricity has done as much as human effort can accomplish towards the annihilation of space and time, and its adaptation for practical purposes is, perhaps, the greatest invention of the present century.

The power of rapidly exchanging messages and replies with almost every part of the globe implies the existence of an organisation which has been built up noiselessly, but with infinite skill, judgment, and tact. It is clear that, like the penny postage system, the electric wire is identifying itself with the business habits and convenience of the world at large. It is therefore astonishing that there should be an occasional hesitancy in encouraging the rapid growth of so formidable an addition to our means of communication, which must, inevitably, lead to an enormous increase in the revenues of the various companies. Some of the present rules and regulations, however, seem to be in the direction of prohibition and not encouragement. It appears to be tacitly assumed by the telegraphic officials that the traders and not the consumers are those to whom an obligation is due. A considerable increase in commercial telegrams would follow the granting of increased privileges to senders, for a large amount of the present messages relate to matters of such comparatively small magnitude, that any difficulty, or increase of cost in transmitting, might easily become prohibitory. All languages should be allowed, and any proposal to make a difference between code words and other words should be rejected. The employment of telegrams is an important aid to the progress of civilisation and the commercial prosperity of the world ; and, consequently, the reduction of rates and removal of restrictions would doubtless be beneficial to all.

The aim of the Author has been to render the work as comprehensive, correct, and complete as possible ; but he cannot accept any responsibility whatever for any consequences arising from error, want of instruction, explanation, or other cause of any kind in connection therewith. Every possible care and attention have been taken in the compilation ; and on its merits only does he present the book for the use of the public.

It has been brought to the Author's knowledge that some persons have purchased a single copy of the "A B C Telegraphic Code" for service in compiling Codes of their own ; the Author would intimate that such an operation is a breach of the Copyright Act, and liable to become a matter of legal and unpleasant procedure. Should, however, any person desire to appropriate any part of this Code for their own individual or private use, and not for publishing, the Author is not adverse to a proposal for permission to allow the same.

On page x examples are given of a complete and unlimited system of Coding. Although it may, probably, not be in strict accordance with some of the Rules of the Telegraphic Conference, it may be useful under certain other circumstances, and also where cypher messages are accepted, or a letter rate charged.

LONDON, 1880.

PREFACE TO FIRST EDITION.

THE Electric Telegraph may be said now to embrace the whole of the civilised world in its network of cables and wires. The largest class of persons who are continually availing themselves of its great and manifold advantages are those engaged in mercantile pursuits. On the other hand, there are great disadvantages connected with the present system of sending messages, not the least important of which are those of expensiveness and publicity. The merchant on looking over his accounts always expects to find the item for "telegrams" a very heavy one; it may, therefore, be assumed, on the ground of economy alone, that he would be found willing to give a fair trial to any good system which guaranteed a considerably reduced expenditure; and there can be no doubt that business men generally feel the want of a better and more economical system.

As regards the publicity of the old system, the Author is aware that cipher messages are used to ensure secrecy, but their use is very limited, owing to the trouble and difficulty they occasion to the sender, transmitter, and the receiver, caused by the want of a simple system.

These and other equally great disadvantages satisfied the Author that an attempt should be made to overcome them; and as it does not appear that the attempt has been made by anyone else, he ventures to submit "The A B C Universal Commercial Electric Telegraphic Code" to public notice. It will be found to contain a dictionary of sentences adapted to meet the general requirements of Financiers, Merchants, Shipowners, Brokers, Agents, &c., &c.

SIMPLICITY, ECONOMY, and SECRECY, are the three great objects which the Author has kept in view.

With regard to SIMPLICITY, every sentence is identified with and represented by a single Code word. This is the simplest and easiest possible method for any telegraphic Code.

The ECONOMY of using this Code will be seen at a glance. Very frequently a single Code word represents a complete message, and in other cases a Code word would represent from four or five to upwards of twenty ordinary words. The saving effected on a single foreign message would therefore, in many cases, more than repay the cost of a copy of the volume, and in a short time the saving would be quite a hundred-fold. It will, of course, be necessary that any mercantile house using this Code should see that their friends with whom they wish to communicate are supplied with a copy ; the cost of which, as before remarked, will be insignificant when compared with the saving effected.

The SECRECY of the message between two persons can be made absolute, even though any other person may have every command of the telegram and of the contents of the volume. Every sentence is identified with a Code Number of five figures to be found in 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0, which can be represented by a word, sentence, or group of ten different letters of the alphabet, after the same manner as a tradesman places a private mark on his goods to denote price, &c. All that is necessary is that the two persons shall agree upon any ten different letters that may suggest themselves. Examples may be found on pages vii. and viii. It will be seen thereby that the number of possible variations is practically unlimited ; consequently, the choice of a Code of ten letters is also unlimited, their great variety admitting of frequent changes if necessary ; in fact, the change might be made for every message, or every hour, by agreed arrangement, and thus the absolute secrecy of the Code maintained.

The Author hopes that his work will show the possibility of attaining SIMPLICITY, ECONOMY, and SECRECY, the three great objects of a telegraphic code, and that the time may be not far distant when the use of this Code will become as universal as a Code of Marine Signals, a Railway Guide, or Time Table.

EXAMPLE.—I.

To send a telegram according to the plan of this work, first have the message clearly written out at full length, then select the leading words or their equivalents in the message. On referring to the 'A B C,' the Code Word will be easily found in the next previous column, opposite to such leading word or words, for example :—

MESSAGE.

'There is a favourable change in the market in consequence of small supplies coming to hand. Telegraph cost, freight, and insurance Dutch crushed sugar, immediate shipment, payable one-third on shipment, two-thirds on delivery. Last parcel arrived in a very bad state, owing to bad weather at sea ; have held survey, certificate by first post. Keep us well advised of sailings from your port.'

"Enrique" is stranded, but do not expect any damage ; got on shore through fault of pilot. Tugs now assisting ; we write you full particulars.'

CODED.

Maundering, Congress, Supperless, Counter, Enemistar, Illicitous, Patrolling, Panivorous, 'Aretology, Waxwork, Sweeten, Salissant.

"Enrique," Streamlet, Solstice, Turtle, Worthily.

CIPHER.

With regard to SECRET telegraphy in cipher, choose any ten different letters of the alphabet, for example "Cumberland," to represent 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0. As a great many of the sentences are numbered above 9,999 it is necessary to make them all of five figures each ; for this reason noughts must be prefixed until the number 10,000 is arrived at. If this plan is not adopted some confusion will arise to the receiver, as the letters will become mixed up. The above message by this plan would be as follows :—

daerc | dmech | cmnum | dmlrc | udueb | dldrd | cdurr | cddam
 dcure | cecmd | cbddm | cuuru

"Enrique" | cmlec | cmmue | cbrbm | ceben

All that the receiver has to do is to tick off the message into groups of five letters each as above.

EXAMPLE CIPHER CODES.*

The following tables have been compiled to illustrate the formation and selection of secret codes; and to avoid possible confusion, the letters J and W have been purposely omitted, because of their similarity to I and V respectively, which are by some methods of telegraphy frequently made to do duty for each other.

EXAMPLE II.

The following examples show and explain a method of telegraphing up to five units of any given subject in one word. To apply this system, take the monosyllables indicated under the necessary figures and run them into one word of ten letters. When more than five units are required to be telegraphed, the monosyllables may be construed into two or more words. Each of the following lines may be made to represent Numerals, Sterling, Weights, Products, Manufactures, &c., according to the special requirements of the users of this work.

Manufacturers' price lists, also list of ports for shipowners, may easily be made workable by the above plan. Nothing more is required than to identify each article or port with a monosyllable or number.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

Times.

'No one who telegraphs should be without it; the plan and contents appear to have been compiled with the utmost care. It is sure to become popular.'

Daily Telegraph.

'An excellent book. Every man of business should procure this valuable help, supplying a want long experienced by the commercial community.'

Morning Post.

'The compiler, in preparing his code, has had in view three great objects,—SIMPLICITY, ECONOMY, and SECRECY; and, so far as we can judge, he has been most successful in his endeavours; the work cannot fail to be useful to those who have occasion to use the telegraph to any extent.'

Daily News.

'Is compiled with a view to ensure ECONOMY, SIMPLICITY and SECRECY in the despatch of messages, and is adapted to meet commercial and other requirements.'

London and China Telegraph.

'A work in which a telegraph code is explained, which, on account of its SIMPLICITY, ECONOMY and SECRECY, will doubtless be found of great use.'

Mining Journal.

'Since the telegraphs have been in the hands of the Government, we have become so accustomed to telegraphic inter-communication that we have gradually grown more and more impatient in sending our orders to distant correspondents and obtaining their reply through the ordinary postal channels; but when it is a question of communicating with foreign countries the cost of telegrams is still so high, that much difficulty is frequently experienced in retaining the intelligibility of a message, and at the same time so abbreviating it as to keep the cost of transmission within reasonable bounds. To remove this difficulty, Mr. W. CLAUSON-THUE has arranged a very ingenious code, admirably adapted for the use of merchants, brokers, and, indeed, all having correspondents at a distance. The book is so arranged that any business message can readily be transmitted either by code or cipher, and read with the utmost facility by the correspondent receiving it. The code is extremely useful, and will unquestionably come largely into use amongst business men.'

Bullionist.

'The author of the A B C code has elaborated a very complete system, which enables the transmission of a long sentence by a single word or a number, which will ensure accuracy and secrecy, and with these two other desirable elements, SIMPLICITY and ECONOMY, Stock Exchange operations may be facilitated by the code adapted to Railways, British, Foreign and Colonial Banks, &c., &c., the whole representing a great labour for the future facility of business in this department.'

Iron.

'The messages or sentences are suited to all the principal trades and professions, and have evidently been selected with care so as to combine SIMPLICITY, ECONOMY and SECRECY,—simplicity to suit the capacity of any clerk; economy, to reduce the charge for telegrams, which is beginning to be a serious item in merchants' expenses; and secrecy, to obviate the present public system of sending messages.'

Produce Market Review.

'SIMPLICITY, ECONOMY and SECRECY are the three great objects which the compiler has kept in view. Considerable ingenuity and labour appear to have been spent in the securing of these primary essentials of a telegraphic code.'

Morning Advertiser.

'As a means of reducing the expense of telegraphy, this code will be found invaluable to all engaged in mercantile pursuits, the saving effected in a single foreign message would considerably more than cover the cost of the volume. This handy book will be found of the greatest service to all whose business is largely dependent upon telegraphy, and is adapted for use in all branches of trade and commerce.'

Shipping and Mercantile Gazette.

'Mr. W. CLAUSON-THUE has worked out his principle with considerable ingenuity, and his system, were it used, would no doubt simplify messages, save time and expense, and ensure, if required, what would frequently be much prized, secrecy. In the construction of the code the author has exercised much laborious industry.'

Standard.

'This code involves SIMPLICITY, ECONOMY, and SECRECY, and its importance will doubtless be recognised by firms in constant telegraphic communication with various parts of the world.'

Public Opinion.

'The code here practically explained and illustrated by examples, appears to be a very ingenious one, and after a little practice, easily to be understood.'

News of the World.

'An ingenious method of conveying telegraphic messages.'

Echo.

'This comprehensive book is admirably adapted for every description of commercial and financial telegrams.'

Monetary and Mining Gazette.

'A work of incalculable value to commercial houses which are in the habit of spending large sums on telegraphic communications. This admirable code will enable merchants to save hundreds of pounds every year. It reduces the expense of telegrams to a minimum. It is remarkably complete, is very ingenious, and so clear and simple, that a child may understand it at once. Another great advantage is that it effectually promotes secrecy.'

Home News for India, Australia, and New Zealand.

'Its method seems as satisfactory as ingenious, and we should certainly recommend business men to give the system a trial.'

Journal of Commerce.

'This elaborate book contains codes for every class of commercial and financial telegrams.'

Globe.

'A discussion was recently carried on in the newspapers as to what words were to be treated as compound in the transmission of telegraphic messages. For the future—so far, at least, as merchants, &c., &c., are concerned—there will be little occasion for thinking of such philological niceties; they have only to use the A B C Telegraphic Code, and they will save the expense, not merely of sending single words, but whole sentences. It is manifest that this system of making one's wants known at the other end of the wire reduces the dispute into insignificance. It will, of course, be necessary for persons using the code to see that their friends with whom they wish to communicate are supplied with a copy; but as in a short time the saving would be quite a hundred-fold, a man who telegraphs largely can afford to buy a copy for each of them.'

Investors' Guardian.

'An electric code for the transmission of messages is a matter of considerable importance, not only to the commercial but to the general public. Correspondents at different quarters of the globe, having a copy of this work at each end, can, by means of this code, communicate with great simplicity and economy; the saving of expense in the cost of telegraphic messages may thus be considerably reduced. The compiler appears to have bestowed great care upon the work, and we can recommend it to those who are in the habit of telegraphing on an extensive scale as a simple and easy telegraphic code.'

Railway News.

'This code is more complete and economical in use than any similar work yet issued. It has been compiled with great care, so as to answer the daily requirements of all the principal branches of commerce, and as combining SECRECY, SIMPLICITY and ECONOMY, the code should come into extended use.'

Grocer and Oil Trade Review.

'As to the present system of telegraphy, its principal disadvantages are the expense and publicity necessarily involved, and it is to remedy these that the author has prepared his code. There is no doubt that, when in good working order, it would be a great advantage to many who constantly use the telegraph.'

Weekly Dispatch.

'The A B C Code has supplied a want much felt in commercial circles. Foreign telegrams are expensive luxuries, but by the aid of this manual their cost may be reduced to a minimum. The author's system also ensures complete secrecy.'

Lloyd's Newspaper.

'We have before us a most useful technical book in the shape of an "A B C Telegraphic Code." The volume is handsomely issued, and we should strongly recommend it to the attention of all interested in the subject. The system seems as clear as telegraphy ever can seem to the uninitiated.'

Public Ledger.

'Is specially adapted to meet the requirements of merchants, &c., &c., when sending numerous telegrams abroad, combining as it does SIMPLICITY, ECONOMY and SECRECY. Not the least of its merits, so far as our readers are concerned, is a complete list of products and commodities.'

Daily Recorder.

'The A B C code is the most extensive and complete effort of the kind that we have yet seen; it is worthy of deep and patient study for sake of the golden guineas that may ensue; the process will become simple by practice.'

City Press.

'Its object is to meet the requirements of merchants, &c., &c., &c., by a simple, economical and secret code, which will, in all probability, find much favour.'

Journal of Applied Science.

'This work appears to us to supply a desideratum. From its completeness and simplicity we can heartily recommend this code for general adoption, for it is truly "Multum in Parvo."

British Trade Journal.

'We believe that merchants and others would do well to look to this A B C code, which unquestionably offers advantages in use, economy being by no means the least important.'

European Mail.

'The work, which must be the result of an enormous amount of ingenious thoughtful labour, cannot but commend itself to the attention of all classes of commercial men, to whom it appears to us to be indispensable. The simplicity of the arrangement of the coding is not the least important feature in the work, for this portion is so effectively done, that a few minutes study will suffice to make a man of average ordinary ability sufficiently acquainted with the proper working of the system. The work has our heartiest approval.'

Allen's Indian Mail.

'The demand for a cheap, simple, and secret process of sending telegrams appears to be thoroughly supplied by Mr. W. CLAUSON-THEO'S "A B C Telegraphic Code." The system, as explained in the opening pages, appears to be very simple and wonderfully complete for mercantile purposes.'

British Mercantile Gazette.

'The mercantile community have here presented to them a system by which telegraphic communications may be transmitted between two parties with SECRECY and ECONOMY. The work seems comprehensive, and, if the system actually possesses the simplicity it bears evidence of, it cannot fail to be appreciated. We have no hesitation in saying that this A B C code offers great advantages to merchants and others, in use, economy being one of the most noticeable features.'

Lloyd's List.

"A great boon has been conferred on those who have to resort largely to the telegraph in conducting their business, by the publication of the A B C code. This book must have entailed a vast amount of work on its author, Mr. W. CLAUSON-THUE, but as it will without doubt come into very general use among business men, his labour will not have been spent in vain. It is suitable for all the principal trades and professions. The object which the author has kept in view has been, as far as we are able to judge, attended with complete success. The ECONOMY of using the code is apparent at the first glance; the saving to be effected on a single foreign message would in many cases repay the cost of the work. The SECRECY of a message is guaranteed by adopting the author's cipher, which is fully explained in the preface of the book, to which we beg to refer our readers."

Birmingham Daily Gazette.

"The universal use of the electric telegraph in business transactions in the present day has rendered necessary the adoption of some system by which commercial telegrams may be sent with SECRECY, and at the same time with SIMPLICITY and ECONOMY. The expense of ordinary business telegrams is a serious item in a merchant's accounts, but by the adoption of this code system great expense is saved and at the same time perfect secrecy secured. "The A B C Telegraphic Code" is admirably adapted for this object. The author has evidently taken great pains to render the work as complete as possible, and the "Code" cannot fail to be of great service to mercantile and business men, who will be enabled to transmit important messages with secrecy, and, at the same time, correctly and economically."

Sheffield Independent.

"The A B C Telegraphic Code" is, as it professes to be, specially adapted for the use of merchants, shipowners, brokers, agents, and others. It does contain "Multum in Parvo" in all truth, and we cannot help congratulating Mr. CLAUSON-THUE upon his extremely lucid treatise. People of business who telegraph largely may save very many pounds a year by making his system theirs, for it is based on most logical principles, and may, in fact, be termed phonographic telegraphy: firstly, because it contracts matter in words, and consequently in cost, a hundredfold; and secondly, because it is to the uninitiated as unknown a tongue as Pitman's, Gurney's, or Odell's; in short, the three great essentials of SECRECY, ECONOMY and SIMPLICITY are admirably blended in this work. Even the most unimaginative mind may grasp the extremely logical deductions of the author, which clearly proves the fact, long asserted by detectives and experts, that the more simple the cipher, the more undecipherable it must necessarily be.

Wolverhampton Chronicle.

"Such an increase has recently taken place in the occasions on which the electric telegraph is used, that merchants and others find their expenses under this head growing into a large item; hence Mr. CLAUSON-THUE has given his attention to the subject, and with considerable success has arranged a very ingenious code, easy of application to messages to be sent long distances. The plan is clearly explained in the preface of the work before us; and so trifling is the cost of the work in comparison with the saving it proposes to effect, that we may expect it to come largely into use; as far as we can judge, his labor has been rewarded with considerable success."

Huddersfield Daily Chronicle.

"The A B C Telegraphic Code" is a very useful work, and will be of great service in the transmission of important private messages, such as sent by bankers, stockbrokers and the mercantile public. Mr. CLAUSON-THUE's plan is a very decided improvement on the use of cipher messages, and also a great saving in expense, and we think he has succeeded in showing it in a most satisfactory manner."

Hull Eastern Morning News.

"Several attempts have been made to form an universal electric telegraphic code. The most intelligible and most complete we have seen is the "A B C Telegraphic Code." The compiler aims at SIMPLICITY, ECONOMY and SECRECY, and we think he has succeeded; evidently, at the expense of much thought and ingenuity. The economy of the system is at once apparent, and its secrecy and simplicity will be easily understood on reference to the work."

Liverpool Daily Courier.

"Mercantile firms whose business involves frequent telegraphic intercourse with distant countries, and whose correspondence thus becomes a very prominent feature in their expenses, will be glad to hear of a book which promises to aid them in avoiding a great part of the cost, while rendering telegrams more distinct. Such a work is the "A B C Telegraphic Code." Those who desire to send messages in cipher are enabled to do so in the most secret manner without any complication; while the telegrams are safe from prying eyes, there is no danger of confusion. The compiler supplies all that is likely to be needed by the mercantile public in communicating with their correspondents abroad."

Dundee Advertiser.

"In these days of rapid communication, the telegraph is becoming daily more essential to business men. The ordinary postal channels have become slow. Orders may now be given and delivered before a letter could travel from the place where the goods are wanted to the place of production. In these circumstances the merchant's account for telegrams has begun to assume formidable dimensions and any practical plan for reducing this heavy item is a decided boon to business men. Such a plan has been constructed by Mr. CLAUSON-THUE, and published under the title of the "A B C Telegraphic Code." The author, in compiling this code, has succeeded admirably, and he might, without the slightest exaggeration, claim for his system the essential merit of intelligibility; the plan is so simple that any clerk of ordinary capacity may master it at a glance. Its ECONOMY is self-evident; by a simple understanding of the persons using the code SECRECY is also ensured; the SIMPLICITY is an admirable feature, and the compiler has evidently been at great pains to make his system cover the daily requirements of all branches of commerce. Compared with the immense saving that might be effected where the telegraph is largely resorted to, the cost of a few copies of the code would be a mere bagatelle."

Coventry Standard.

"This is a work practically adapted for the commercial community. It comprises a code very ingeniously compiled; its object is to secure a system of secret telegraphy—the very principle which has hitherto been so much wanted in telegraphic communications. A study of this code will amply compensate those who, by their business transactions, cannot fail to be conscious of the importance of the want which the book supplies."

Halifax Courier.

'The absence of an efficient yet simple method of condensing messages has long been felt by firms having any extent of telegraphic correspondence. This want seems to be fully met by the "A B C Telegraphic Code." It is only necessary for the sender and receiver of messages each to possess a copy of this work to enable them to very materially reduce the annual outlay for telegrams. It also provides another advantage, viz., complete secrecy, as the system of cipher messages may be varied to any extent.'

Liverpool Mercury.

'In commercial circles, one of the great drawbacks to the ordinary system of communication by telegraph is the expense. To obviate this, as well as to preserve secrecy, a code has been arranged by Mr. CLAUSON-THUE, combining ECONOMY, SECRECY, and SIMPLICITY, it is specially adapted for merchants, brokers, and others, whose business may depend upon a speedy and economical communication with distant places. Coded messages have been for some time in existence in commercial circles; but this is even a still shorter system, and is very highly spoken of for its efficiency.'

Dundee Courier and Argus.

'There is just published a most useful volume entitled the "A B C Telegraphic Code," adapted to meet the general requirements of all people in business who have any occasion to use the telegraph as a means of conducting their affairs. The code is very simple; the economy of the arrangement is at once apparent. An easy arrangement is also pointed out whereby two or more persons can communicate in cipher, and still derive all the benefits of codification. The book is one which merchants must have long felt the want of, and we anticipate for it very general use.'

Bristol Daily Post.

'The idea of the book seems to us to be a good one, and it is carried out with a degree of industry which is very creditable to the compiler, as anyone will acknowledge who examines the work, a manual by means of which, parties can communicate with each other with perfect security, and at a great saving of telegraphic charge, in a manner that is fully explained, so as to secure absolute secrecy even from persons who are in possession of the volume and telegram. We commend the work to those who are interested in its object.'

Glasgow North British Daily Mail.

'The great extent to which telegraphy is now used in connection with commercial transactions renders the telegram account a somewhat heavy item to all business men. A large proportion of this expense, especially in Atlantic Cable telegrams, and others where the sending of a few words is a matter of some cost, but any two parties having each a copy of the "A B C Telegraphic Code" may easily advise each other on all subjects of commercial interest, at an expense which would be trifling when compared with that incurred by using the ordinary means. A further advantage of the code is, that it may be used as a secret cipher. The book is prepared with great care, and cannot but prove useful to commercial men.'

Belfast Ulster Echo.

'"A B C Telegraphic Code" is the title of a handsome volume which has just been published. Merchants have often reason to complain of the heavy expense of their telegrams, and the author of this work proves by a simple arrangement that two parties can easily advise each other on matters of commercial or general interest. Among its numerous advantages are SIMPLICITY, ECONOMY, and SECRECY, all of which the compiler clearly shows, and the work will be found most invaluable to all commercial men.'

Belfast Morning News.

'The "A B C Telegraphic Code" is a work specially intended for the use of all those who spend large sums annually in telegraphic messages. There can be no doubt about the economy which the system may effect by its use and the secrecy is also well assured.'

Sheffield Telegraph.

'It is a well-known fact that the contents of telegraphic messages do occasionally "leak out" to other people than those to whom they are addressed, and, under these circumstances, principals and their agents are often put to a great deal of trouble in the effort to ensure secrecy. Such trouble may be saved by the adoption of the system laid down in the "A B C Telegraphic Code," which combines SIMPLICITY, ECONOMY, and SECRECY, in a very effective manner. To those who are engaged in commercial transactions requiring the above special advantages, we can confidently recommend this work.'

Leeds Mercury.

'The rapidity with which the telegraph has extended itself as a means of communication, and its obvious advantages over all others, has lately led to the proposal of several schemes for rendering it still more universal, and diminishing the cost of transmitting long messages. Among these is one which seems to us far superior to anything previously offered to the public, and well worthy of a trial by those who have a moderate amount of telegraphic correspondence. The principle on which it is based, and the mode of working are fully explained in the "A B C Telegraphic Code," by which it is evident that a great saving of cost is effected. Simplicity is added to Economy, in a manner which does the highest credit to the Author's ingenuity. Another excellent feature of the system is the readiness with which it lends itself to the transmission of secret messages known only to the sender and the receiver. Thus we have a telegraphic code in which ECONOMY, SIMPLICITY, and SECRECY are combined, and one that deserves to become as universal as a code of marine signals, a railway guide, or a time table.'

Darlington Northern Echo.

'All persons who are in the habit of corresponding by wire with commercial houses on the Continent, in India, at the Antipodes, or in America, will find this book literally worth its weight in gold. So far as we have had opportunity of judging, Mr. CLAUSON-THUE'S Code is a model of simplicity. We should add that it is also drawn up with a view to its use as a cipher, and that the cipher is as intelligible to those who use it, and as unintelligible to all who are not initiated, as could well be desired by the most secret negotiators in the world. Whoever is familiar with this code will use it, and, were it universally known, it would be universally used by all who telegraph frequently to distant correspondents.'
